Ioulia Pentazou is a historian specialized in digital interactive and information design, and museum curator. She studied history in the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, and holds a M.A. in Modern Greek History (National and Kapodistrian University of Athens), and a Ph.D in Digital Design (Department of Architecture, University of Thessaly). She has participated in many research projects concerning the teaching of history in digital environments, the visualization of the past and the representation of urban history in digital applications and technology. She was responsible for the content analysis, information design, and interactive scenarios of many historical and cultural and websites, and curator in permanent and temporary exhibitions in Volos museums.